

The Porterhouse Gin Select

The quintessential British gin and tonic has seen a huge resurgence in popularity, with small distilleries popping up all over the country. We have selected a few of our favourites, all produced here in Scotland, for you to try. Which one will be your favourite?

Porter's Gin

A sharp, refreshing citrus blast hits you as you take your first sip, but a short, drying finish leaves you wanting more. It's fantastic news that Aberdeen has produced a gin with the quality to compete with some of the finest names around. Ben Irvani, one of the creators behind the gin recommends a classic G & T, served with a quality tonic and slice of lime.

£4.00

Daffy's Gin

Named after the goddess of gin [yes there is one], Daffy's Gin hails from Edinburgh. It is certainly a classic gin with a modern twist, combining classic gin botanicals such as juniper and coriander with strains of lemon, created using French grain spirit. This is a clean, crisp and hugely enjoyable gin. Served with mint leaf and lime garnish.

£4.00

Caorunn Gin

A London dry style gin, containing 11-hand foraged Scottish botanicals found growing in the distillery's estate in the Highlands. A premium gin served with red apple and lime. Caorunn gets its name from the Gaelic for Rowanberry, which is one of its key botanicals, providing a sweet and sharp refreshing taste.

£4.00

Gin Bothy Rhubarb

Handmade in small batches in the award-winning Bothy, nestled in the Angus glens of Scotland, Gin Bothy Rhubarb is infused with fresh rhubarb and handpicked from the Bothy garden to create a rich, fruit-flavoured liqueur. Try it neat or with ginger ale, lemonade or prosecco.

£4.00

Gin Bothy Gunshot

This Scottish gin takes its name from the colour of bullets, and is infused with cinnamon, cloves and mixed spices. Best served on the rocks or with ginger ale to bring out the citrus notes.

£4.00

Blackwoods Gin

Produced only in small batches, Blackwoods Dry gin is infused with handpicked botanicals from Shetland, including juniper, coriander and lime. Each harvest offers a slightly different range of botanicals, which give Blackwoods its unique and complex flavour.

The Porterhouse Gin Select

Jindea Gin

Jindea is a blend of ten botanicals, including single estate Darjeeling tea which has been hand-harvested from the Goomtee Tea Estate in the stunning Kurseong Valley in West Bengal, India. The spring harvest produces a tea with aromas of apricots with a vibrant palate of white grape and spring flowers.

£4.00

Rock Rose Gin

Rock Rose is created from a range of carefully selected local and traditional botanicals, each of which is chosen for its unique flavour properties. The gin gets its name from the botanical Rhodiola rosea, literally a rose that grows in the rocks and in colder climes. Rhodiola rosea adds a delicate floral note to the gin alongside rowan berries, sea buckthorn and juniper berries.

£4.00

Vesperis Gin

This gin from Blackford Distillery is smooth, balanced and reminiscent of a crisp heather morning, with notes of heather honey, blossoms and citrus.

£4.00

Hendricks Gin

This classic gin is distilled in small batches of 500 litres at a time, and infused with Bulgarian Rosa Damascena and specially selected cucumbers from the finest producers.

£4.00

Boë Scottish Gin

This gin is named after the inventor of gin, Professor Franz de la Boe. A classic London gin made with a careful combination of 13 botanicals, Boë has a characteristically citrus flavour with extraordinary balance and smoothness.
